Dear IARS Member:

Because Anesthesia & Analgesia is dedicated to international research, we are pleased to offer Japanese members of the IARS a unique membership benefit: English review of your manuscript prior to submission to Anesthesia & Analgesia for peer review. The purpose of the English review is to help your papers conform to standard scientific English. There is no charge for this review; it is a free benefit to IARS members.

Before your manuscript can be accepted for English review, the corresponding author, who must be an IARS member, should submit an email letter and the proposed abstract to my editorial assistant, Stella Serpa, ss2733@columbia.edu.

Your letter should include the following sentences:

- “I am an active member of IARS.”
- “I agree to submit my manuscript to Anesthesia & Analgesia.” If the manuscript is not accepted for publication by Anesthesia & Analgesia, you are free to then submit it wherever you like.
- “I understand that the English review is being provided as a free service prior to submission for peer review. There is no assurance that manuscripts edited for scientific English will be accepted for publication.”
- “I have read and followed the Guide for Authors.” You can find the most recent Guide for Authors at <http://www.aeditor.org/GuideForAuthors.pdf>.

Please request the English review 1–2 months before you plan to submit the manuscript for peer review. After receiving the required email letter and the abstract, Ms. Serpa will schedule your request on the editorial staff’s calendar. Please be certain to have a first draft of your manuscript ready by the requested date.

I look forward to hearing from you and your colleagues.

Sincerely,
